▲ EUROPE : Arrangement de «Narvik» d'assistance mutuelle de défense entre la France et la Norvège

La Norvège se rallie au concept de « dissuasion avancée » et signe un accord d'assistance mutuelle avec la France

Depuis, le Royaume-Uni, l'Allemagne, la Pologne, les Pays-Bas, la Suède, le Danemark, la Belgique et la Grèce ont rejoint [ou sont sur le point de le faire] cette initiative sur la dissuasion avancée. Après un temps de réflexion, la Norvège vient de les imiter, en signant l'arrangement dit de «Narvik» [en référence à la bataille du même nom livrée contre l'Allemagne en mai 1940, ndlr] le 27 mai, lors de la réception de son Premier ministre, Jonas Gahr Støre, par le président Macron à l'Élysée. [...] Cela étant, l'arrangement de Narvik ne porte pas seulement sur la dissuasion avancée. Selon M. Støre, il contient une «clause de défense mutuelle», c'est-à-dire que «nos deux pays s'engagent à se soutenir mutuellement [...] en cas de besoin». Cet accord «ancrer» la coopération entre les forces françaises et norvégiennes «dans des structures concrètes, la planification, l'entraînement et le stockage préventif de matériel militaire», a-t-il détaillé. De son côté, M. Macron n'a pas parlé de « défense mutuelle » [déjà garantie par l'article 5 du Traité de l'Atlantique Nord] mais d'un «principe d'assistance mutuelle».

Entretien avec Jonas Gahr Støre, Premier ministre du Royaume de Norvège.

Le Président de la République a reçu le Premier ministre du Royaume de Norvège, Jonas Gahr Støre, mercredi 27 mai 2026 au Palais de l'Élysée. Cette visite s'inscrit dans la continuité du partenariat stratégique global signé entre la France et la Norvège le 25 juin 2025 et illustre le renforcement de la coopération entre les deux pays dans les domaines de la défense, de l'énergie, de l'espace et des industries stratégiques. Les échanges ont porté en particulier sur le renforcement de la coopération entre nos pays en matière de défense. Ont été aussi évoqués les sujets spatiaux, en particulier en matière satellitaire, alors que la Norvège vient d'intégrer le programme européen Iris2, et en vue du Sommet spatial des 9 et 10 septembre prochains.

Norway and France sign mutual defence agreement

'The Narvik Agreement will bring new momentum to our cooperation. The agreement contains a provision on mutual defence: our two countries commit to come to each other's aid – including with military assistance – should the need arise. Besides the UK, France is the European Ally that sails most extensively in the north. The agreement reinforces our cooperation through concrete structures, plans, exercises and prepositioning of equipment, and will enable us to mount a swift and coordinated response when it is really needed,' said Mr Støre. [...] Mr Støre emphasised that the process with France does not constitute a change in Norway's nuclear weapons policy. 'There are to be no nuclear weapons on Norwegian soil in peacetime. We will also give priority to promoting arms control and non-proliferation. Closer cooperation with France in Europe and within the NATO framework could reduce the risk of other countries being tempted to develop their own nuclear weapons,' said Mr Støre. Paves the way for further cooperation in important areas for both countries,' said Mr Støre.

Norway Moves Under France's Nuclear Umbrella

It was also reported that Denmark is open to co-financing a European nuclear umbrella and is ready to discuss the possible deployment of nuclear weapons on its territory. Sweden has also stepped up discussions on nuclear deterrence. In late January, Sweden held preliminary consultations with France and the United Kingdom on possible cooperation in nuclear deterrence. The Scandinavian countries have intensified discussions on nuclear policy amid growing doubts over US security guarantees for Europe and Washington's willingness to meet NATO obligations in a crisis, as well as concerns over Russia. [...] France remains the only nuclear power in the European Union, and the idea of extending its nuclear protection to allies has been repeatedly discussed. [...] Germany has also begun talks with France on a joint European nuclear umbrella and is discussing possible co-financing of the project.

Why is Trump pressing Arab countries to normalise ties with Israel?

Trump is under pressure from Iran hawks including Republican senator Lindsey Graham, who argue the emerging peace deal with Iran concedes too much to Tehran. The US president's call for more countries to join the Abraham Accords could help ease those concerns, though Saudi Arabia and Qatar have said they will not normalise ties with Israel without progress toward Palestinian statehood.

What to Know About the Abraham Accords as Trump Pushes Mideast Nations to Recognize Israel as Part of Iran Deal

"Trump is basically trying to switch horses mid-race," William Figueroa, an assistant professor of international relations at the University of Groningen, tells TIME. "Having failed to force Iran's unconditional surrender, he is now trying to sell an equally improbable farce; tying regional peace to a fragile diplomatic agreement that in no way addresses the root of the conflict."

Dans un texte publié sur son réseau Truth Social, Donald Trump a commenté sa conférence téléphonique de samedi avec les dirigeants de l'Arabie saoudite, des Emirats arabes unis, du Qatar, du Pakistan, de la Turquie, d'Égypte, de Jordanie et de Bahreïn. « J'ai déclaré qu'après tout le travail accompli par les États-Unis pour essayer de rassembler ce puzzle très complexe, il devrait être obligatoire pour tous ces pays, au minimum, en simultané, de signer les accords d'Abraham. » Ces accords, lancés sous le premier mandat de Donald Trump, visent à faciliter la normalisation des relations entre les pays arabes et Israël.

Assessing Russia-Afghanistan Military-Technical Cooperation

On 27 May 2026, Russia and the Afghan Taliban signed the terms of the military-technical cooperation agreement on the margins of the Moscow International Security Conference have not been made public. What is confirmed is that both parties have framed it in terms of expanded bilateral cooperation... Russia formally recognised the Taliban government in July 2025, becoming the first major power to do so... Moscow and Kabul are communicating (to each other, to regional actors, and to the West) that their relationship has crossed a threshold: from informal pragmatism to institutionalised cooperation... Moscow is likely managing this through deliberate ambiguity: Shoigu's public remarks focused on Western obligations to unfreeze Afghan assets rather than on Russian commitments, a framing that deflects scrutiny whilst projecting Moscow as a responsible actor.

Russia signs military partnership with the Taliban

The new agreement underscores the deepening ties between the Kremlin and the Taliban, and while the exact details remain murky, Afghan Defense Minister Mohammad Yaqoub said the agreement marked an expansion of the bilateral relations between the two countries... On Wednesday, Shoigu called for Western countries to “unfreeze” sanctions on the Taliban and “fully acknowledge their full responsibility for their 20-year presence in Afghanistan”... Earlier this month, the European Commission confirmed that it had invited Taliban officials to Brussels, although a spokesperson said that the invitation “does not by any means constitute a recognition.”

Moscow Signs Military Partnership With the Taliban

The deal was finalized during an international security forum in the Moscow region following a meeting between Russian Security Council Secretary Sergei Shoigu and Afghan Defense Minister Mohammad Yaqoub. Yaqoub is the Taliban's former military chief and the son of its founder, Mullah Mohammad Omar. The specific terms of the deal have not been made public, according to the Interfax news agency. Bilateral frameworks of this nature generally involve the exchange of weapons, manufacturing licenses and defense technology, alongside joint research projects... The Taliban swept back to power in 2021 after overthrowing the U.S.-backed government and re-imposing an austere version of Islamic law in Afghanistan. In 2024, President Vladimir Putin called the Taliban “allies in the fight against terrorism.”

Russia Signs Military Cooperation Agreement With Taliban

Russia and Taliban members have signed an agreement on military-technical cooperation. This was reported by the Russian Interfax news agency... In April 2025, Russia's Supreme Court suspended the ban on the Taliban movement's activities in the country... Before that, the organization had officially been designated as terrorist and banned in Russia... Under the new rules, a ban on a terrorist organization may be suspended if it has ceased activities related to the promotion, justification, or support of terrorism, as well as terrorist crimes against Russian interests. In early 2025, The Insider published an investigation alleging that Russia's Main Directorate of the General Staff (GRU) financed killings of US citizens by Taliban members.

Evolving Security Partnerships in a Fragmented World - Gilberto Teodoro Jr Secretary of National Defense, Philippines

The institutions, rules and norms which underwrote relative peace and prosperity for decades have come under strain, and long-standing structures of cooperation are evolving amid diverging priorities, shifting interests and resource constraints. Against this backdrop, it is no longer a question of whether the international order will change. Change is already under way. And for us in the Philippines, and the wider Indo-Pacific, this international order is constantly being challenged at sea. And I must make a prefatory statement that this year marks the tenth anniversary of the Arbitral Award of the South China Sea. This landmark ruling affirmed the fundamental principle that maritime entitlements are derived not from ‘historic rights’ but from international law, particularly the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS)... Hence, the Philippines is well placed to safeguard maritime liberty and the legal and physical infrastructure that enables the world to sail, to trade and to prosper...

At Shangri-La, Washington and Southeast Asia talked past each other

Asia watchers are typically accustomed to hearing opposing perspectives from the United States and China at the annual Shangri-La Dialogue, Southeast Asia's premier defence conference, which this year brought together officials and analysts from 29–31 May. But with China's Defence Minister Dong Jun absent for the second year in a row, the clearest divergence was not between the two superpowers. The most revealing contrast was that between US Secretary of War Pete Hegseth – as he now styles the role – and Vietnam's General Secretary of the Communist Party To Lam, who delivered the keynote address... To Lam sought in his remarks to warn against “uncontrolled competition” and urge nations to work together to achieve “peace, trust, and development”... According to Hegseth, US President Donald Trump expected American allies to carry their fair share of the burden to defend their interests.

China, US lead security discourse at Shangri-La

Da Wei, director of the Center for International Security and Strategy at Tsinghua University, told the Global Times that the organizer had hoped both US and Chinese defense ministers would attend. He noted that China and the US are the key players in the dialogue, and interest in China continues to grow... This year, China was represented by officials from the Chinese People's Liberation Army research institutes and the navy, led by Major General Meng Xiangqing, a professor at the National Defense University... This marked the most positive tone a US defense secretary has taken toward China at the Shangri-La Dialogue since Global Times reporters began covering the event on-site in 2015... At the same time, however, improved China-US relations do not make every country happy. For countries such as Japan and the Philippines, it is not necessarily good news.

Japan Defense Chief Takes Swipe at China at Security Meet

Under Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi, Japan has quickened its pivot towards a more proactive defense policy, further shaking off – with US encouragement – its pacifist outlook in place since the end of World War II. The change has drawn frequent rebukes from Beijing, which has accused Tokyo of following a reckless policy of “new militarism” that could destabilize the region. Japanese Defense Minister Shinjiro Koizumi hit back on Sunday, saying “nothing could be further from the truth”... A diplomatic spat between the Asian rivals has been rumbling since Takaichi suggested in November that Japan might intervene militarily if China were to attempt to seize Taiwan, the self-ruled island that Beijing claims is part of its territory... The Shangri-La Dialogue is Asia's top defense forum, bringing together security officials and experts from about 45 countries. In contrast to Japan — and its ally the United States — China has sent a watered-down delegation that does not include its defense minister, Dong Jun, for the second year running.

Trump's intensified airstrikes in Nigeria are strategically pointless

"On May 19, a press release from the Nigerian military proclaimed that, in a joint operation with the United States, it dealt a 'devastating blow' to ISIS[...]" "Body counts alone do not lead to victory — a lesson that reaches back to Vietnam — and neither do 'decapitation' strikes necessarily make insurgencies crumble." "Sporadic strikes are strategically pointless, and intensive strikes feed into blinkered body-count mindsets." "The story of Mainok himself [...] suggests that Nigeria cannot just 'eliminate' such figures. It must instead figure out how to stop producing them."

Au Liban, Tsahal a "de nouveau hissé le drapeau d'Israël" sur le château de Beaufort

L'armée israélienne a annoncé dimanche 31 mai avoir pris le contrôle de ce site historique et très stratégique situé près de la ville de Nabatieh, dans le cadre de l'extension de son offensive contre le Hezbollah. Israël avait utilisé cette forteresse médiévale comme base lors de son occupation du sud du Liban, jusqu'en 2000. "Quarante-quatre ans après la bataille héroïque de Beaufort et en ce jour de commémoration des soldats tombés lors de la Première Guerre du Liban (1982), des soldats sont revenus au sommet de Beaufort et y ont de nouveau hissé le drapeau d'Israël." C'est ce qu'a annoncé, dimanche 31 mai au matin, le ministre de la Défense Israël Katz [...]. Le château de Beaufort, forteresse médiévale située près de la ville de Nabatieh et occupée par les Croisés au XII^e siècle, avait été utilisé par l'armée israélienne "comme base durant leur occupation du sud du Liban, qui a duré deux décennies avant de prendre fin en 2000". Tsahal s'empare du château stratégique de Beaufort, dans le sud-Liban

Dans le cadre de son offensive contre le Hezbollah, l'armée a aussi frappé des "positions stratégiques, recherché et neutralisé des infrastructures militaires dans la région du Litani" [...] Tsahal a indiqué avoir lancé ces derniers jours une opération terrestre dans la région de la crête de Beaufort et du cours d'eau Wadi Saluki, « afin de détruire les infrastructures [du Hezbollah] et d'éliminer les terroristes, dans le cadre du renforcement du contrôle opérationnel dans le sud du Liban et de l'élimination de la menace directe pesant sur Etzba HaGalil – ou la péninsule de Galilée – et Metula », ainsi que pour « étendre la ligne de défense avancée ». [...] Le Premier ministre Benjamin Netanyahu a salué la récente prise par Tsahal du château historique de Beaufort au Liban et de la crête stratégique environnante. Il a qualifié cet événement de « tournant décisif » dans la politique israélienne, alors que les troupes s'enfoncent plus profondément dans le sud du Liban dans le cadre des opérations terrestres en cours contre le Hezbollah.

Israël dit avoir pris le château médiéval de Beaufort, près de Nabatiyé

L'armée israélienne a annoncé dimanche matin avoir « capturé » le château médiéval de Beaufort, au lendemain de combats signalés entre le Hezbollah et les Israéliens autour de cette forteresse située sur un éperon rocheux surplombant le Litani et l'est du caza de Nabatiyé. Dans un message sur X, l'armée israélienne dit que cette prise de ce site stratégique et historique a eu lieu suite à une « vaste opération » sur ces hauteurs et dans la région de Wadi Slouqi qui relie plusieurs régions du Liban-Sud. Cette opération visait, selon l'armée, à « détruire des infrastructures du Hezbollah et d'éliminer des combattants » afin de garantir la « sécurité de la Galilée et de Metula », dans le nord de l'Etat hébreu.
