

No better friend, no worse enemy

Type de contenu : Texte

Type de médiation : sans médiation

Type de support : Volume

Titre(s) : No better friend, no worse enemy : the life of General James Mattis / Jim Proser

Auteur(s) : Proser, Jim (19..-....)

Publication : New York (N.Y.) : Broadside books : HarperCollins publishers

Date de copyright : C 2018

Description matérielle : 1 vol. (VIII-257 p.) ; 24 cm

ISBN : 978-0-06-280391-7
0-06-280391-3

EAN : 9780062803917

Autre variante du titre : [Life of General James Mattis.]

Classification décimale Dewey : 956.705 092

Note sur les bibliographies et les index : Notes bibliogr.

Note sur le contenu : No better friend No worse enemy Liberation Beyond Baghdad A girl names Alice The enemy of my enemy Task Force Ripper The sleeping enemy Graveyard of empires City of mosques Epilogue: No better friend, no worse enemy

Résumé ou extrait : "When General James Mattis took command of the First Division in 2000, he took for their motto a paraphrase of Roman general Lucius Cornelius Sulla: "No better friend, no worse enemy." In 2003, General James N. Mattis shared a "Message to All Hands," to his soldiers. He shared with them the importance of the mission, the goal to act with honor, and ended with the motto he brought to his division from a paraphrase of Roman general Lucius Cornelius Sulla: "Demonstrate to the world that there is 'No Better Friend, No Worse Enemy' than a US Marine." Mattis was the first Trump presidential cabinet nominee and received nearly unanimous, bipartisan support for his nomination, with only one vote against. He received a rare waiver of the guidelines that exclude recently active military leaders from the position of Secretary of Defense. What could create such unprecedented unity, even enthusiasm, in the hyper-partisan political rancor of 2017? Beyond Mattis' obvious military competence for the position, he also possesses such personal integrity, fostering universal confidence. Told through Proser's insight and talent for storytelling, it is this unimpeachable character that is the primary subject of No Better Friend, No Worse Enemy. He leads with insight, humor, fighting courage and fierce compassion - not only for his fellow Marines who volunteer to follow him through hell's front door, but for the innocent victims of war. His martial and personal values have elevated him to the highest levels of personal success and earned him the trust of his Marines and many fellow Americans. We are stronger both from his service and his example." (éditeur)

"When General James Mattis took command of the First Division in 2000, he took for their motto a paraphrase of Roman general Lucius Cornelius Sulla: "No better friend, no worse enemy." The first Trump presidential cabinet nominee, Mattis received nearly unanimous, bipartisan support for his nomination. He also received a rare waiver of the guidelines that exclude recently active military leaders from the position of Secretary of Defense. Proser examines Mattis' character and shows how his martial and personal values have elevated Mattis to the highest levels of personal success." (adapté des informations de l'éditeur)

Sujet - Nom de personne : Mattis, James Norman (1950-....)

Sujet - Collectivité : États-Unis Marine Corps.

Sujet - Nom commun : Guerre d'Irak (2003-2011)