

South Asia needs hybrid peace

Type de contenu : Texte

Type de médiation : sans médiation

Type de support : Volume

Titre(s) : South Asia needs hybrid peace / Zia Ul Haque Shamsi

Auteur(s) : Shamsi, Zia Ul Haque (1958-....)

Publication : New York (N.Y.) [etc.] : Peter Lang

Date de copyright : C 2022

Description matérielle : 1 vol. (XIX-96 p.) ; 24 cm

Collection : Peter Lang prompt

ISBN : 978-1-4331-9422-1
1-4331-9422-8

EAN : 9781433194221 rel.

Appartient à la collection : PROMT (Frankfurt) 1614-385X

Classification décimale Dewey : 327.172 095

Note sur les bibliographies et les index : Bibliogr. p. [89]-96. Notes bibliogr.

Résumé ou extrait : "There has been a lot of discussion on the phrase 'Hybrid War' particularly since the Russian annexation of Crimea in 2015. Though the concept was as old as the warfare itself and would continue to be employed until the world clings to the international relation's theory of realism which emphasizes on power and security. If twentieth century was one of the bloodiest with two great wars and several proxy wars which left Korea divided, Afghanistan destroyed, Kashmir bleeding and Middle East in shreds, then twenty first century is also not showing any respite to the poor and developing nations. Perhaps, it is time to shun the talks on hybrid war and instead think about hybrid peace. The concept is inspired by Pakistan's Founder Mohammad Ali Jinnah's precepts of 'peace within and peace without.' It may sound idealistic, but it is certainly doable with concepts of productive engagements in external affairs, just distribution of natural resources, universal spread of health and education, and joint development in science, technology, cyber, and informational domain. If there is one sub-region which needs hybrid peace forthwith, it is South Asia. Afghanistan deserves a break and Kashmir issue needs to be resolved on priority. The enduring rivalry between India and Pakistan has already cost enormously to the region with little under two billion people on account of development, progress, and prosperity. This book aims to explore the possibilities of hybrid peace in South Asia with resolution of major disputes between India and Pakistan including Jammu and Kashmir (J&K), enduring peace in Afghanistan, and revitalization of SAARC under the paradigm of Hybrid Peace." (préf.)

Sujet - Nom commun : Maintien de la paix -- Asie du Sud

Gestion des conflits -- Asie du Sud

Politique et gouvernement -- Asie du Sud

Relations extérieures -- Inde -- Pakistan