

To have and have not

Type de contenu : Texte

Type de médiation : sans médiation

Type de support : Volume

Titre(s) : To have and have not : energy in world history / Brian C. Black

Auteur(s) : Black, Brian C. (1966-....)

Publication : Lanham (Md.) [etc.] : Rowman & Littlefield

Date de copyright : C 2022

Description matérielle : 1 vol. (X-298 p.) : ill., cartes, graph., fotogr. ; 24 cm

Collection : Exploring world history

ISBN : 978-1-5381-0503-0
1-5381-0503-9

EAN : 9781538105030 rel.

Appartient à la collection : Exploring world history. 2768-721X

Classification décimale Dewey : 333.790 9

Note sur les bibliographies et les index : Notes bibliogr. Index

Note sur le contenu : I Energy Exchange in the Biological Old Regime (before 1400) 1 Energy in the Human Past Transitioning by the Numbers Biological Old Regime II Industrialization and the Great Reversal (1400-1920) 2 Colonialism, Mercantilism, and Empire Transitioning by the Numbers Industrialization 3 Fossil Fuels and the Transformation of Human Work 4 Energizing Everyday Human Life III Energy Broadens the Gap (1900-2000) 5 Energy and National Security 6 Energy Technology and Empire in the Cold War Era 7 The Energy Gap Takes Shape IV Integrating Sustainability (2000-2022) Transitioning by the Numbers Considering Sustainable Energy 8 Energy Transitions and the Culture of Sustainability Epilogue Index

Résumé ou extrait : This timely book tells the sweeping story of energy, tracing patterns of use in human history with an emphasis on the modern period. Contextualizing global history through the lens of the Anthropocene, Brian Black traces stages of industrialization, concluding with our current transition within the reality of climate change.

Sujet - Nom commun : Ressources énergétiques
Ressources énergétiques -- Aspect politique -- Histoire
Industries énergétiques
Changements climatiques