Résumé ou extrait : A commemoration, originally published in 1907, by the Congress of the United States of the services of the French Auxiliary Forces in the War of Independence. It opens with an account of the dedication of a statue to the Comte de Rochambeau in Washington, followed by a detailed history of the French participation in our war for independence - an interesting historical piece that encompasses not only the man who it was made to honor but also those who knew and honored him.
