Résumé ou extrait : Studies the impact which climate change has upon global politics, peace, and security. Ultimately, as the author emphasises, climate change should not only be treated as a topic of discussion in relationship to global politics, but also a serious issues which requires specialist action. The author traces the journey of India and the US towards taking action on climate change through numerous pacts and agreements. It gives the glimpses of how India and the US are aiming to tackle climate change issues, and explores the relationship between the two countries under the leadership of newly elected US President, Joe Biden.
