

Smaller but more deadly ? : facing static or declining defence budgets European air forces are reorientating their forces to be smaller, lighter and more powerful as fourth generation fighters, UAVs and early network centric capabilities start to become operational, meanwhile the former Warsaw Pact air forces, now NATO members, continue to re-equip with Western equipment

Titre(s) : Smaller but more deadly ? : facing static or declining defence budgets European air forces are reorientating their forces to be smaller, lighter and more powerful as fourth generation fighters, UAVs and early network centric capabilities start to become operational, meanwhile the former Warsaw Pact air forces, now NATO members, continue to re-equip with Western equipment

Ensemble : AEROSPACE INTERNATIONAL n° 6 Vol. 32 03050831 01/06/2005

Auteur(s) : ROBINSON Tim

Adresse bibliographique : 2005

Description matérielle : 48-51 p. : couleur

Sujet(s) : EUROPE
FORCE AÉRIENNE