

Commanders Winn and Knowles: Winning the U-Boat war with intelligence 1939-1943

Type de contenu : Texte

Titre(s) : Commanders Winn and Knowles: Winning the U-Boat war with intelligence 1939-1943 [texte imprimé] / Kohnen David

Mention d'édition : The Enigma Press

Editeur, producteur : The Enigma Press $d1999

Description matérielle : 161 p. ; 20,5 cm

ISBN : 83-86110-34-1

Note(s) : Hors achat ou don - Provenance inconnue

Résumé ou extrait : At the strategic core of the Allied naval effort in the Battle of the Atlantic were Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve Commander Kenneth Alward K.A. Knowles of the U.S. Navy F-21 Atlantic Section. Together, Winn and Knowles influenced the most pivotally. They fostered an atmosphere of Anglo-American cooperation that was once described by Patrick Beesly as probably closer than between any other British and American organizations in any service and in any theater. The purpose of the present study is to reassess some previously established assumptions about the Winn and Knowles team. Fresh perspectives and conclusions will be offered drawn from recently accessible documents and photographs.

Sujet(s) : Souvenirs

Biographie

Biographie Maritime

Maritime