Résumé ou extrait : L'avant page de titre indique : "How do América's democratic allies perceive and respond to a relative decline in U.S. power and influence and the simultaneous rise of China ? Using the case studies of Europe, the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, Japan and Southeast Asian countries, this book offers a broad assessment of the perceptions of threat and the strategies used by these allies to cope with the relative decline of America's hegemonic power, the rise of China and the transforming world order. In answering these central questions, contributors focus on two complementary analytical approaches. The first examines the perceptions of systemic changes by America's allies : How are U.S. allies framing this issue and what kind of political discourse is emerging with regards to it ? The second approach focuses on the concrete foreign policy and defense strategies put forward by these allies. The book explores the extent to which U.S. allies are willing to support U.S. hegemony and considers the democratic allies' understanding of the international structure, their relations to the United States, and their own aspirations in this changing world order. This book will be of interest to general readers as well as scholars and students of U.S. foreign policy, foreign policy analysis, and international relations."
