

Operations of encircled forces

Type de contenu : Texte

Type de médiation : sans médiation

Type de support : Volume

Titre(s) : Operations of encircled forces : German experiences in Russia

Auteur(s) : Center of military history Etats-Unis

Mention d'édition : [Reproduction en fac-similé]

Publication : Washington : United States Army, Center of military history : [U.S. G.P.O.], 1988

Description matérielle : 1 vol. (V-74 p.) : cartes ; 24 cm

Collection : CMH pub 104-15

Appartient à la collection : Army historical series gen. ed. Jeffrey J. Clarke Washington Center of military history 199?-.... 104-15

Classification décimale Dewey : 940.542 7

Note(s) : "This publications replaces DA Pam 20-234, January 1952"

Shipping list no.: 89-573-P

"Prepared by a committee of former German officers under the supervision of the Historical Division, EUCOM" (préface)

Note sur les titres associés : La couv. porte en plus : "Historical study"

Note sur l'original reproduit : Fac-similé de l'édition de Washington : Center of military history, 1952 (DA Pam 20-234, janvier 1952)

Note sur le contenu : Introduction The pocket of Klin : breakout of a Panzer division Encirclement at Velikiye Luki : failure of a rescue operation The pocket west of Cherkassy : the inside view The pocket west of Cherkassy : the outside view Encirclement of a Panzer army near Kamenets-Podolskiy Conclusions

Résumé ou extrait : "The Soviet-German war was marked by numerous encirclements, first of Soviet units and, as the war continued, of German units as large as entire armies, such as the 6th Army at Stalingrad. Fighting encircled became a frequent occurrence for German commanders, and their experiences at Klin, Cherkassy, and Kamenets-Podolskiy are related here as well as an analysis of the critical role of air support when fighting encircled." (site de l'éditeur)

Sujet - Collectivité : Allemagne Heer. 1871-1945.

Sujet - Nom commun : Guerre mondiale (1939-1945) -- Opérations militaires -- URSS

Tactique

Guerre de siège

Défensive (science militaire)

Attaque (science militaire)