

U.S. Army World War II corps commanders

Type de contenu : Texte

Type de médiation : sans médiation

Type de support : Volume

Titre(s) : U.S. Army World War II corps commanders : a composite biography / by Robert H. Berlin

Auteur(s) : Berlin, Robert Harry (1946-....)

Autre(s) responsabilité(s) : Combat studies institute Etats-Unis - Éditeur scientifique

Publication : Fort Leavenworth (Kan.) : Combat studies Institute, U.S. Army command and general staff College [1989]

Description matérielle : 1 vol. (21 p.) : tabl. ; 23 cm

Autre variante du titre : [US Army World War II corps commanders.]

Classification décimale Dewey : 940.541 273

Note sur les bibliographies et les index : Notes bibliogr.

Résumé ou extrait : "World War II U.S. Army corps commanders were the orchestrators of combat, the men responsible for coordinating the fighting power and tactical deployment of divisions. Twenty-two U.S. Army corps were actively engaged in combat operations during World War II. They were led by a total of thirty-four general officers. Dr. Robert H. Berlin identifies these leaders, assesses their military careers, and discusses why they were selected for corps command. This Combat Studies Institute Special Study traces the interwar assignments of these future generals, all of who served at least one tour as instructors in the army education system. The study also explores which corps commanders were promoted and which were relieved. Dr. Berlin's well-documented study reveals how World War II corps commanders were prepared for senior-level command." (avant-propos)

Sujet - Collectivité : États-Unis Army.

Sujet - Nom commun : Guerre mondiale (1939-1945)

Généraux -- États-Unis

Commandement des troupes -- 1900-1945

Forme, genre ou caractéristiques physiques : Biographie