

Thinking about strategy

Type de contenu : Texte

Titre(s) : Thinking about strategy : a tribute to Sir Michael Quinlan / coordinated by Bruno Tertrais ; foreword by Thérèse Delpéch

Autre(s) auteur(s) : Tertrais, Bruno (1962-....)

Autre(s) responsabilité(s) : Delpéch, Thérèse (1948-2012) (Préfacier)

Adresse bibliographique : Paris : l'Harmattan, DL 2011

Description matérielle : 1 vol. (138 p.) : 24 cm

Collection : Le débat stratégique

ISBN : 978-2-296-55618-8 (br.)

Appartient à la collection : Le débat stratégique

Titre de forme : [Mélanges. Quinlan, Michael.]

Note sur les bibliographies et les index : Notes bibliogr. Bibliogr. de Sir Michael Quinlan p. 137-138

Résumé ou extrait : This publication is a tribute to the memory of Sir Michael Quinlan, one of the most distinguished European strategic thinkers of the recent decades, who passed away in March 2009. Though not very well-known outside policy-making circles, Sir Michael had a unique career in UK government and NATO circles. What made him special was a rare combination of intellectual and human qualities, which made him an exceptional figure in the transatlantic community. His influence on Western strategic thinking was profound. In 2010, key American, British, and French analysts -- many of whom were close friends of his -- were asked by the Foundation for Strategic Research to discuss some of the most important issues of our time, in particular on nuclear policy matters, in the light of Sir Michael's thinking

Sujet - Nom de personne : Quinlan, Michael Edward (1930-2009)

Sujet - Nom commun : Armes nucléaires

Forme, genre ou caractéristiques physiques : Mélanges et hommages