Résumé ou extrait : This book explores the global phenomenon of populism in relation to states' foreign policy, addressing questions such as: How do populists mold their foreign policies? Is there a 'populist foreign policy' ? What are the implications of the populist implementation of policies in the regional, interregional, and global arenas ? To this end, the book brings together a diverse group of scholars who have already researched on populist foreign policies in specific countries, who contribute shared chapters that examine the drivers, patterns and effects of populist foreign policies within distinctive regions.
