

Africa's fighter market : as the MiG so widely supplied during the Cold War to 'friendly' African air forces become more difficult to operate and the acquisition of replacements fly in the face of outside pressure for the countries to first feed their poor, a analysis of the current state of Africa's fighter needs

Titre(s) : Africa's fighter market : as the MiG so widely supplied during the Cold War to 'friendly' African air forces become more difficult to operate and the acquisition of replacements fly in the face of outside pressure for the countries to first feed their poor, a analysis of the current state of Africa's fighter needs

Ensemble : AVIATION NEWS n° 3 Vol. 68 03065634 01/03/2006

Auteur(s) : TUCKER-JONES Anthony

Adresse bibliographique : 2006

Description matérielle : 202-207 p. : cartes; couleur

Sujet(s) : AFRIQUE

MARCHÉS

AVION DE COMBAT

AVION DE CHASSE ET DE BOMBARDEMENT