Note sur le contenu : Introduction Chapter 1: A tale of two Belfasts?: Inequality, segregation, and the politics of identity in a "post-conflict" city Chapter 2: Social immobility, ethnopolitics, and the "culture wars": contextualizing violence and disorder in Belfast, 2008-2014 Chapter 3: Post-conflict masculinities, exclusion, and contradictions in ex-combatant community-based peacebuilding Chapter 4: Identity, the politics of policing, and limits to legitimacy Chapter 5: Brexit: a constitutional moment in unionism? Chapter 6: "Peace fatigue," power sharing, and political impediments to community-based peacebuilding Conclusion

Résumé ou extrait : "Utilizing a critical sociological perspective, this book examines how overlapping class, gender, and spatial inequalities within and across Unionist and Nationalist communities shape processes of identity formation and party politics in Northern Ireland and implications of such processes on community-based peacebuilding and conflict transformation." (éd.)

"Inequality, Identity, and the Politics of Northern Ireland examines how the politics of threat and resentment, undergirded by persistent poverty and class and gender inequalities across Catholic and Protestant communities, shape dynamics of political conflict, while simultaneously giving way to critical subjectivities at the community level through which more transformative visions of "peace" may emerge."
